Suzie Boss is an author and educational consultant who has worked with educators on nearly every continent on student-centered learning. She is the author of more than 10 popular books for educators including Project Based Teaching and Redefining Student Success. She collaborated with award-winning global educator Stephen Ritz on The Power of a Plant which tells his inspiring story of creating green classrooms and healthier outcomes for children and communities across New York's South Bronx and around the world.

Getting Off to a Good Start with PBL

Project-based learning has the potential to lead to deeper, more engaging learning for your students. But not all projects generate the same high-quality results. This hands-on workshop is designed to guide you through the project design process. Expect to build your toolkit of strategies for managing and assessing PBL, including classroom routines for student-centered learning and check-ins to make sure all students are making progress toward important learning goals. Case studies from across content areas and grade levels will inspire you to design real-world projects that will challenge your students to be effective problem solvers.
